Dear chevre,

It's Tishrei. In a few short days we'll observe Yom Kippur, and then on to Sukkot. In these holy days, we strip down to essentials. On Yom Kippur we give up physical comfort, showers, sex, leather shoes, even food; we tune out every possible distraction to focus ourselves on our inner lives. On Sukkot, we take away the solid homes that most of us are blessed to rely on unthinkingly during the rest of the year, and the wind whistles through the thin frames of our sukkot, setting the decorations dancing. The heady rush of the secular school year's start subsides, too, and students and teachers settle into the stable, regular rhythms of the first semester.

Our spiritual life mimics the natural world. Around us, the leaves have started to drift downward. The graceful dark shapes of branches re-emerge, remembered but surprising again after the summer's greenery—another kind of renewal. Often we focus on the fall of leaves as a symbol of death. But fall is also revealing. When the season pares away the lush foliage and the bright colors, we are left with a clearer sight of the trees' shapes. Judaism embraces beauty and decoration, but returning to the bones of our lives is just as important a process for us. In the spring we remove chameitz; in the fall, we hone our lives as the quiet month of Cheshvan approaches.

Rabbinic sources sometimes call the month of Cheshvan Marcheshvan and say that it's mar, bitter, because there are no exciting holidays in it. I think that Cheshvan is actually the culmination of this process of winnowing down that our High Holy Days begin. Cheshvan teaches us about who we are when the distractions go away. The value of boredom in kids' lives is often touted by educators. Take away razzle-dazzle, pre-crafted games, and media, and kids discover new interests and abilities in themselves. The Child Mind Institute states that "boredom fosters creativity, self-esteem and original thinking."<sup>1</sup> But boredom benefits people of all ages! For adults, too, boredom can improve mental health, foster creativity, motivate us to find new activities and pursue new goals, and improve our powers to focus and self-regulate.<sup>2</sup> For example, I am always grateful when the time pressure of High Holy Day preparation subsides—but I then have to be far more careful and intentional about planning out my work afterward, without the adrenaline of that hardest of deadlines!

Judaism embraces beauty and decoration, but returning to the bones of our lives is just as important a process for us.

In Tishrei, we're in the thick of the holidays, the panoply and tangible drama of Yom Kippur and Sukkot (and Sh'mini Atzeret and Simchat Torah, too!) all around us. Notice, during these High Holy Days, what parts of yourself that are normally hidden may be revealed. Under the color and movement and busy shapes of your daily life, what forms the bones? Which regular habits and practices? Which relationships? Which values? Tishrei can lift up these truths for our notice, and Cheshvan can improve our self-discipline and help us to return to them. Our task is then to keep our branches, our bones, in our sights for the rest of the year.

May our self-awareness be written into the year to come, for good and for growth and for life.

G'mar chatimah tovah, may you be sealed for a good year,
Cantor Vera

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Dear Friends,

By the time this bulletin publishes, we will be between Rosh HaShanah and Yom Kippur. We will have gathered for the first real in-person High Holy Day experience in three L.O.N.G. years, and I will have my first from a new vantage point—the bimah. As my first year of presidency really gets going, I am trying to set goals for where I would like to see my tenure take Temple Emanu-El. I'm asking myself questions: How can we better serve the community? How can we bring more people into the building? What changes do I want to see over the next two years, and how do we get there?

Together, I want to build answers to these questions and grow our community. Let your voice be heard and your presence seen. Come to a Saturday service. Volunteer for one of our committees. Help us develop tangible goals for the next two years. Please email me (president@TempleEmanu-El.org) with your thoughts and insights—and the more concrete your requests, advice, and suggestions, the better!

L'shanah tovah um'metukah,
Jenn Lampron
President

GREATEST GENERATION SPOTLIGHT

Spotlight on Barbara Berg

Barbara Berg has been a member of Temple Emanu-El for fifty-nine years, ever since she and her husband, Joel z"l, moved to Groveland from Florida. When Barbara looks back on her life, she says, "I've been lucky." She cherishes wonderful memories of a close-knit family growing up; a beautiful sixty-nine-year marriage; a daughter, Cindy; and decades of tight friendships, deep involvement with our temple life, and killer bridge games in Groveland and Haverhill.

Barbara was born in 1928 to Aron Shore, a Russian-born printer who walked across Europe to catch a boat to America when he was just twelve, and Frances Magazine, born in Mattapan into an affluent family of six sisters and a brother. Barbara grew up in Roxbury near Franklin Park with her elder brother, Jack, whom she idolized, and her younger sister, Helaine. Frances and her sisters "stayed together," gathering every Friday night with their kids for Shabbat and vacationing together in Nantasket. Her youngest aunt, Lil, whom Barbara resembles, paid Barbara extravagantly to babysit. Every Saturday, Barbara, Jack, and Helaine visited Bubbe Magazine, who plied them with Yiddish and their favorite foods, and every Sunday they visited Bubbe Shore. Aron was a "hands-on" dad. He taught them how to skate, ride bikes, and swim, and took them into Boston for Jewish events. He died of cancer at the age of forty-eight, when Barbara was fifteen; after his death, Barbara says, "I saw a different side of my mother: a woman who knew business and went to work" in Cambridge, taking the streetcar an hour each way. "She kept us together. I was proud of her."

World War II darkened Barbara's teenage years. During the years of blackouts, "there were no boys; but that didn't stop us!" Jack risked jail by altering his birth certificate to join up, aged seventeen, and served for three years, flying fifty bomber missions as a radio gunner; his letters home were heavily censored. Barbara and Helaine sent him Hershey bars every weekend. Midway through the war, Jack came home for five days, part of an Air Force escort bringing FDR's son Elliott Roosevelt and his bride, Faye Emerson, back from France. Frances stood at the window, hysterical, when Jack went back. (Joel served in the Navy in the Pacific theater, training for an invasion of Japan, and ran support for landing boats on the Nagasaki shore. He said to Barbara, just once, "I knew where I was [going to be] slaughtered on the beachhead, and I knew I was never coming back.")

Barbara's cousin Claire fixed her up with Joel when Barbara was eighteen. Joel was five years older, living at a frat house while he went to college on the GI bill. Frances adored him and admonished Barbara to "be good to him!" They married in November 1948. In 1957, living in Florida, Joel and Barbara welcomed Cindy into their family. When they moved to Groveland in 1963, Barbara started working as bookkeeper for past Temple president Jerry Fishbein z"l at Hudson's Apparel in downtown Haverhill, a job she held for nearly twenty-five years.

A month after arriving here, Barbara met Shirley Holber, and they became fast friends. She and Janet Kopel became friendly on the trip to Israel that Rabbi Korinow led in 1992. Barbara says, "I loved Rabbi Korinow. Joel did, too. He could talk to anyone. And Gail, one of the most beautiful people I ever met. If you were religious or not, she made it like home. She was perfect." Barbara vividly remembers partnering with Janet for five months in the Temple office, helping Nancy LaFleur settle in: "The things Janet and I did! We sent out four hundred letters at a time, schlepped them to the post office. I don't think we weighed two hundred pounds together! Every day with Janet was a good one."

Barbara continues to follow Joel's good advice to take a long walk every day; she plays bridge every Tuesday; and she stays true to who she knows she is, a wonderful member of our Temple Emanu-El community.

CHESED COMMITTEE

I watched with a smile on my face as holiday goody packages left the temple just before Rosh HaShanah, to be delivered to members as far away as Newton and Gloucester, Massachusetts, and Exeter, New Hampshire, as well as to college students and those in the military. A mitzvah at any time of year, but especially so this year, as we were able at long last to bring personal greetings for a very sweet and healthy new year.

I am grateful at each holiday when so many of our members respond to the call: for bakers, latke fryers, and hamantaschen bakers, and for those to deliver packages to congregants unable to come to the temple in person. These holiday greetings are a win-win effort which reinforces that each one of us is a part of this Temple Emanu-El community and that we support each other with kindness, outreach, and holiday-specific contact.

But it is not just at holidays when the Chesed Committee responds to member needs. We are there when grieving families need shiva support; when an illness necessitates organized meal delivery (through Lotsa Helping Hands, our online scheduling calendar); or when a member needs a ride to a temple program. Our Spirited Aging Together discussion group has been meeting for more than a year and a half, enabling us to discuss various aspects of aging. There are many volunteer opportunities available for mitzvah-making through the Chesed Committee, and we welcome new ideas about other ways we can reach out and support all our Temple members.

★ TEMPLE EMANU-EL ★

Honor Your Father and Your Mother

It is a widely observed Jewish tradition to commemorate the passing of a loved one by memorializing those that have departed with a yahrzeit plaque on a dedicated memorial wall.

At Temple Emanu-El, these plaques are lit on the yahrzeit, or anniversary of death, and for Yizkor services.

Plaques are inscribed with the name of the deceased in both English and Hebrew as well as the date of the person's death. They are available to view whenever the sanctuary is open.

The one-time cost of the plaque is $300. To purchase a plaque in honor of a departed loved one, please contact Lisa or Cantor Vera at 978.373.3861.
