*Please note that we will be using Mishkan T'Filab on the first and third Saturdays of the month.*

Shalom, friends!

This month of July begins in the warmth of Tammuz. As we enjoy the pleasures of talking with one another again in person, and with both the environmental and emotional heat of summer in full swing, I'm also thinking about the tension present in Jewish life between speech and silence. There are some times, and some topics, where we ask ourselves what we can possibly say that will help—or whether to say anything at all. Talking with someone who's lost someone they love; sharing bad news, or information that could hurt; and particularly in this past month, discussing the painful conflict between the Israeli government and Hamas that has wreaked such violent damage on Israelis and Palestinians. (The internet, of course, has vastly increased frequency and broadcast range for all kinds of speech.) There's speech that's hard but necessary. And sometimes there's speech that's better left unsaid.

The month of July is a very appropriate month to consider these issues. The Talmud claims that the second Beit HaMikdash, Holy Temple, was destroyed for the sin of sinat chinam, baseless hatred, hatred that's not based on a sin someone has committed. Sinat chinam includes lashon hara and r'chilut. Rabbi Chaviv Danesh discusses these two categories of speech in his study in "Harmony of a Nation—Overcoming Baseless Hatred":

Lashon hara is speaking (or writing or any other way of conveying) or hearing (or reading or any other way of being conveyed to) a negative report about someone. Similarly, any report that can cause harm or loss to someone else is also forbidden under the transgression of relating lashon hara. ... Rechilut is the act of speaking or hearing any kind of speech that will cause one to dislike someone else. ... Both lashon hara and rechilut are prohibited even if what is being said is true, and even if one did not have intention to harm. (Emphasis added.)

As Jews, we're asked to expend a lot of energy in planning and delivering our words, and listening deeply to the words of others.

The medieval rabbi Moshe ben Maimon (Rambam) outlines five categories of speech in a commentary on Pirkei Avot 1:17, Rabbi Shim'on ben Gamliel's praise of silence over speech, which I read in June as part of the Great Jewish Books Seminar for clergy and educators, run by the Yiddish Book Center. The Rambam says that "speech is divided into five parts according to the Torah's obligation: 1) We are commanded about it; 2) We are warned against it; 3) The disgusting; 4) The beloved; 5) The permissible." In secular language, I'd give those categories as follows: there's speech that has a positive impact, including ritual speech and appreciative speech, which is commanded or encouraged; there's speech that has a negative impact, which is forbidden or discouraged; and there's speech that's impact-neutral. The Rambam emphasizes that we are only impact-neutral when we're sharing things about ourselves: our own personal business, bodies, beliefs, and experiences. When we share, comment on, or even influence other people's lives and actions, we have to pay more attention to what we say and consider our effect even more than our intent.

CANTOR VERA'S MESSAGE

The Rambam encourages us to think about the impact our speech may have on another person's emotions, dignity, and sense of self. He reinforces our Jewish traditional tendencies toward a cautious, conservative approach to speech. Silence is not a hallmark of Jewish tradition. We do our best to assess impact. We also want to keep communicating and to be able to talk in the difficult moments.

If we step back too far from speech with each other, we lose out on learning from our own mistakes and others' responses and challenges to our thoughts and words. We also might fail to share important information that may relate to others' safety. (Especially when we consider situations of abuse within institutions.) And we limit our ability to connect to other people and develop our relationships.

In the Rambam's discussion of the last category, permissible speech, he goes off on what seems like a tangent, railing against rabbis who refused to listen to beautiful content in Arabic songs but would happily hear forbidden or disgusting content in Hebrew. He says: Concentrate on the content of the speech, not the language. To me, this is an invitation both to openness and to not let unfamiliar language bar you from hearing inspiring ideas—and one last reminder that wording, in any language, can obscure content.

As Jews, we're asked to expend a lot of energy in planning and delivering our words, and listening deeply to the words of others. It's worth assessing our speech for any harm we can forestall, before we let it out. We do our very best to not speak r'chilus and lashon hara, to harm anyone else through what we say. And we do our very best to speak up with words of appreciation, comfort, necessary information, and truly constructive criticism, using "I" statements as much as possible. Each one of us is worth both restraint and reaching out.

L'shalom,
Cantor Vera

Fall Classes from Cantor Vera

Cantor Vera is gauging interest for two new classes for the coming year:

- Adult b'nei mitzvah, which will start after Simchat Torah and meet roughly every other week through the end of Spring 2022

For adult Jews of Temple Emanu-El who have not yet celebrated becoming b'nei mitzvah. As a class we'll explore the history and traditions of b'nei mitzvah ceremonies, study Torah and Haftarah trope as well as some of the prayers of Shabbat morning, and prepare together for an adult b'nei mitzvah celebration. Each person in our community belongs on our bimah; come prepare together to claim your space! This course is for members of Temple Emanu-El.

- Liturgy of Shabbat morning, which will start after Simchat Torah

This nine-week course will dive into key moments in the Saturday morning service. We'll learn about the prayers, explore their language, and learn how to chant and sing them. Topics will include Birchat HaShachar, Baruch She'amar, Psalm 150, Nishmat Kol Chai, Bar'chu through the Sh'ma, the beginning of the Amidah, the start of the Torah service, Aleinu, and Adon Olam. This course is open to the wider community.

Please email Cantor Vera if you are interested in participating in one or both of these courses!

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Happy summer, everyone!

As you may have heard, the temple has hired a rabbinic intern to work with us over the upcoming year. Elli Pripas is a rabbinic student at Hebrew College with an expected ordination date of June 2025. She will join us on August 1. Elli will be participating in our High Holy Day and selected Shabbat services and will work with the religious school on Sunday mornings. Please join me in welcoming Elli to our community.

By now, members should have received their dues statements. The board of directors has decided to keep the dues structure and amounts consistent with last year's. While we strive to balance our annual budget, the true cost per household, $2,578, would exceed billed dues. To allow us to continue to offer a robust variety of services and educational opportunities, we ask each of you to promptly remit your full dues amount. (No one is turned away for inability to pay; please contact the office for more information and a dues adjustment application.)

As we begin to return to the sanctuary for services, please keep in mind a few of our health and safety requirements:

- A maximum of thirty-six members will be allowed to attend indoor services.
- Those attending must register in advance via Sign Up Genius and receive confirmation.
- Masks must be worn upon entering the building.

Please see the information elsewhere in this bulletin for more details about in-person events, and check the Shavuon for weekly updates.

Enjoy your summer!

MEMBER SPOTLIGHT

Spotlight on Sandra Kassin-Deardorff: Religious Practices Committee Chair

Sandra joined Temple Emanu-El in 1993. She lives in New Hampshire with her husband, Andy. In addition to her service on the Temple board of directors, she chairs the Religious Practices Committee and is a member of the choir. Sandra quilts, skis, dances ballet, used to do competitive Highland dancing, and is a big fan of the Outlander books and TV series. She works as an engineer at Draper Labs in Cambridge.

Sandra grew up in Brooklyn, New York. Her grandmother, a balabusta (notable homemaker), ran her mother's traditional Jewish household; her dad helped run a Jewish camp in upstate New York. Sandra remembers walking down a steep hill with her mother and crossing a four-lane highway to attend a small Orthodox shul nearby for Shabbat. She attended the Rabbi Harry Halpern Day School in Flatbush through eighth grade, celebrating her bat mitzvah on a Friday night and reading the Haftarah for Shabbat Chanukah. During their undergrad studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Sandra, then an Air Force ROTC cadet, met Andy, an Army cadet. After graduation they moved to Fort Hood, Texas—a Jew and a Unitarian Universalist together in the Bible Belt. There Sandra became certified as a civilian lay leader when the army chaplain, Reform Rabbi Colonel Dryer, retired. Eventually she and Andy moved back to his home state of New Hampshire.

Sandra fondly remembers her first Saturday morning service at Temple Emanu-El: It was Morry Korinow's bar mitzvah, upstairs in the sanctuary. The tunes and liturgy were familiar, and she thought, "This is home." She took her first aliyah ever in the chapel on the Shabbat where we read parashat Tol'dot, the birth of twins. She said the blessings with her own two-year-old twin boys in her arms. All three of Sandra's kids, Ben, Alex, and Julia, attended Solomon Schechter Day School at Temple Emanu-El. With the help of Yaffa Korinow z"l and other members of the Temple Emanu-El village, Sandra catered all three of their b'nei mitzvah celebrations herself, making the Brooklyn-style bagels that her Army friend taught her.

Sandra's a talented service leader and leyner (reader of Torah from the scroll), frequently leyning at our Shabbat and holiday services. She says that leyning "connects me to something Jews have done throughout the ages. Even when I don't like the reading or don't agree with some of what's in it, I love doing it. It makes me feel at one with the ancestors." She enjoys sharing these Jewish traditions that are so important to her with her kids and her grandkids, Brooklyn and Colton. Thank you, Sandra, for helping create such wonderful ritual experiences for our temple!

The Religious Practices Committee helps advise clergy on ritual matters, craft Temple policy around religious practices such as kashrut and ritual garb, and ensure that our services welcome everyone. Sandra says that the committee "wants to help our members feel comfortable and familiar with services anywhere in the world, by offering services that are consistent and accessible to a wide range of Hebrew knowledge, tunes, etc. There are wonderful services every week!"

If you are interested in joining or learning more about the Religious Practices Committee, please contact the office!

★ TEMPLE EMANU-EL ★

Honor Your Father and Your Mother

It is a widely observed Jewish tradition to commemorate the passing of a loved one by memorializing those that have departed with a yahrzeit plaque on a dedicated memorial wall.

At Temple Emanu-El, these plaques are lit on the yahrzeit, or anniversary of death, and for Yizkor services.

Plaques are inscribed with the name of the deceased in both English and Hebrew as well as the date of the person's death. They are available to view whenever the sanctuary is open.

The one-time cost of the plaque is $300. To purchase a plaque in honor of a departed loved one, contact Nancy or Cantor Vera at 978.373.3861.
